EDWARD SHERMAN HOAR

In 1892, in his Three Episodes of Massachusetts History, Charles Francis Adams, Jr. (1835-1915), the grandson of a president and great grandson of another, wrote of Joanna (Hincksman) Hoar: "the common origin of that remarkable progeny, in which statesmen, jurists, lawyers, orators, poets, story-tellers and philosophers seem to vie with each other in recognized eminence." Because of his lineage he may have been prejudiced in his appraisal but the careers of many of her descendants bear him out. Edward Sherman Hoar is one that was both a lawyer and a philosopher. A lawyer in the family tradition, he never allowed himself to be caught up completely in activities far from the soil. His respect of nature and great abhorrence of gross materialism can be appreciated today more than ever. He never attained the celebrity of his father and brothers but that was much a matter of choice. Of him, his elder brother, Ebenezer Rockwood Hoar, said: "We always considered him the flower of our family. He had refinement, taste, courtesy, wit, gentleness, honor, learning and intellectual force." The young man characterized by those words by 1849 had found the confinement of a law practice in New York City oppressive and decided that his future lay somewhere in the open spaces of the west.

That journey to California in 1849, the first leg of which took him to Vera Cruz, was not Edward's first pass at conquering the wilderness of the west. As a freshman at Harvard he had dropped out "to go to the far west to hunt buffaloes." That ill-fated trek, on foot and hampered by a lack of resources, took him only as far as Lexington, Kentucky, where he had relatives. Improved finances, increased maturity and, probably, more in the way of parental blessing, helped ensure success for the combined land and sea passage of 1849.

Mexico was traversed astride a mule purchased in Vera Cruz, an eventful experience but one during which he was able to concentrate on the study of Spanish while en route. Possessed of a facility for languages backed by training in the classics he was soon able to attain a mastery sufficient to successfully defend a man on trial for his life before a jury of which no member spoke any other language.

Edward's introduction to California was as typical of the times as was his reaction. A short period of sampling life in the gold country served to make him realize that that was not where he wanted to be. Instead, he was drawn to Santa Barbara where the environment was more in accord with his taste and habits. The California families took to him as he to them. Soon, the quiet, dignified manner of the well-bred gentleman with such a command of their language so ingratiated itself with them as to inspire a confidence culminating in his acting as a legal advisor and trading partner in dealings that brought cattle to the San Francisco market. In 1850 with statehood came his participation in the formation in the local government. He became the first district attorney for Santa Barbara that year, serving later briefly as assessor and marshalling the special 1852 census. Always, he was able to engage himself in raising fruit and vegetables, not only as an added means of support, but as a source of enjoyment. Knowing his great love of the primitive outdoors it is difficult imagining his ever leaving such a setting as Santa Barbara afforded. But health, family and opportunity influence decisions as well as a longing for one's native place.

Edward Sherman (9) Hoar (Samuel-8, Samuel-7, John-6, Daniel-5, Daniel-4, John-3, Charles-2, Charles-1) was born 22 December 1823, the fifth child of Samuel and Sarah (Sherman) Hoar. After proper preparation he entered Harvard with the Class of 1843. The aborted trip west in his first year interrupted his studies so that when he returned to Cambridge it was as a member of the Class of 1844. Upon graduation he spent a year studying at the Law School and two years in New York City, after which he was admitted to practice in the New York courts in 1848. While in college his only social affiliation was with the Natural History Society, in which he was the curator of geology. The change of classes while at Harvard may have contributed to the fact he seemed not to have been intimate with members of his class and never attended any Class meeting after graduation. More important, likely, was the frail health that followed him throughout the years, discouraging participation in anything less than what he felt was important. In correspondence with his Class secretary, however, he attributed his inactivity to the fact that he had been out of state for much of the time so that --- "lately, when I might have been there (to a class reunion), I have had a sort of consciousness of having drifted so far from Harvard latitudes that, being a rather dismal old fellow, I should not contribute much to the occasion but oddity."

Edward was described by his brother Ebenezer as one who disliked responsibility, and was always trying to avoid it; but once he had undertaken anything he did it marvelously well. His legal acumen was great and he had a capacity for understanding the nuances of human character. He was a botanist of enough note that Sir Joseph Hooker, president of the Royal Society was introduced to him. He was a skilled ornithologist and something of a geologist. He had but a slight acquaintance with Agassiz but was intimate with Thoreau and accompanied him on one of his explorations. Although not a musician he enjoyed good music, attending concerts regularly. In later life he enjoyed reading Homer, Theocritus and the Greek dramatists in the originals.

Edward Sherman Hoar's immigrant ancestor, Joanna (Hinckman) Hoar, came to New England about 1639 in company with her children Joanna, Leonard, Daniel, John and Margery. A daughter Ruth had died previously and eldest son Thomas remained in England. Joanna was the widow of Charles Hoar, the younger, of Gloucester, who had died in 1638. Charles Hoar was a man of stature in that city, engaged in brewing and wool stapling. He had been active in civic affairs, serving as alderman and sheriff. Margery Hoar was the widow of John Matthews when she accompanied her mother to New England and married Rev. Henry Flynt soon after arrival. Daughter Joanna married Col. Edmund Quincy and was great-great grandmother to Abigail Smith who married John Adams, second president of the United States. Son Daniel became something of an entrepreneur, with interests on both sides of the Atlantic. Leonard became the first graduate of Harvard (1650) to serve as president of that college (1671). He married Bridget Lisle, the daughter of John and Lady Alicia Lisle. John Lisle was one of the body chosen by Cromwell to draft the sentence of death for Charles I. His end at the hands of hired assassins in Lausanne and the prosecution of Lady Alicia by Jeffries and execution on the order of James II are well documented in English history. John Hoar became the ancestor of the branch of which Edward Sherman Hoar was part. This line was noted for its bent for the law and propensity for outspokenness, a trait that was to result in much discomfort despite righteous causes. The line almost ended with a mishap suffered by John's only son Daniel in his youth. Providence intervened, however, giving us a subject for this article and an author, a blessing in the case of the former.

Samuel Hoar, the father of Edward, was born in Lincoln, Massachusetts 18 May 1778. He graduated from Harvard in 1802, and after being admitted to the Massachusetts bar in 1805, enjoyed a career of over fifty years as a leading lawyer. His activity in state politics led to a term in Congress in 1835-37 as a member of the House of Representatives. He was active in the Free Soil movement and assisted the organization of the Republican Party. His early advocacy of abolition put his personal safety in peril on at least one occasion. Samuel married Sarah Sherman, the daughter of Roger Sherman (1721-1793), a signer of the Declaration of Independence. Their children were: Elizabeth, born 1814; Ebenezer Rockwood, born 1816; Sarah Sherman, born 1817; Samuel Johnson, born 1820; Edward Sherman and George Frisbie Hoar, born 1826. Sons Ebenezer Rockwood, Harvard 1835, and George Frisbie, Harvard 1846, followed their father into politics. Ebenezer Rockwood as Grant's attorney general in 1869-70 campaigned for the elimination of machine politics in the civil service until forced by Grant to resign under pressure from the same "machine." He was a presidential elector in 1872 on the Republican ticket, and in 1873-75 served in the U.S. House of Representatives. George Frisbie's career spanned service in both houses of Congress, during which time he had an active part in many events of historical importance, including membership on an electoral commission that settled the Hayes-Tilden election dispute in 1877. From 1877 until his death in 1904 he was a leader of the Republican Party in the U.S. Senate. He served as a delegate to every national Republican convention from 1876 to 1904, presiding over the one in Chicago in 1880.

Instead of the limelight shared by others of his illustrious family, Edward basked under the warm sun of Santa Barbara until shortly after the death of his father, 2 November 1856. Then he returned to Concord, where he remained a year before going to Europe with his eldest sister and a girl who had been a schoolmate in Concord, whom he married in Florence before returning home. In 1860 he purchased a farm in Lincoln which he was to manage for eleven years before failing health forced him to give it up. Of this time Edward was to remark that it represented the most notable achievement of his life. His earthy philosophical nature can be seen in several remarks about farming. The fact that he came out even he thought proved that in warfare blows were given as well as received. He also observed that the best fertilizer for a farm was the owner's boots.

After a year away from farming he packed up his family, sailed for Italy and bought a small estate near Palermo on Sicily. Three years exposed to the hazards of "brigandage and vendetta" were sufficient. Selling out he returned to Concord, where he spent the remainder of his life until the very last as he sought mountain air and warmer weather to alleviate the agony of the respiratory affliction that was to take him.

Edward's marriage to Elizabeth Hallet, the daughter of Moses Prichard of Concord, on 28 December 1858, produced a daughter, Florence, born on 23 January 1860. Florence married Moses Brown Lockwood Bradford on 1 July 1885.

Edward Sherman Hoar died at Washington, D.C. 22 February 1893 at age 69. His seven years in Santa Barbara, in the words of Richard H. Dana, left a memory for eloquence and power as an advocate to compare with the very greatest. What was he, this forceful counselor or the shy farmer carting his own produce to Faneuil Hall Market? The staid Yankee or the rootless romantic? The answer is that he was all of these, a kaleidoscope of personalities, defying classification.

(Editor's Note: The foregoing owes much to informants long crossed over. Research is at its most exciting when studying the words of those living the adventure or those intimate with them. We can be grateful that far-seeing persons arranged to preserve those words in "The Class of 1844, Harvard College, Fifty Years After Graduation" (Cambridge, MA, John Wilson and Son, University Press, 1896) and the New England Historic and Genealogical Register. And we are grateful, too, to Richard M. Hinchman of Groton, MA for assistance with this article, as well as the one about A.F. Hinchman that appeared in the June issue of ANCESTORS WEST.)

THE ENLARGED UCSB LIBRARY

Within the past year a new south wing has been added to the main library of the University of California at Santa Barbara. The addition markedly upgrades the facility, providing improved lighting with better appointments along with the added space. To assist those unfamiliar with the library, a floor plan of the lower four of the eight floors appears on the page opposite. It is prepared with emphasis on the sections having genealogical interest. The floors not represented house sections devoted to political science, law, education and literature. The plan can at the best serve as a general guide, deferring to the ample supply of tracts published by the library, and available in conveniently located display racks throughout the building. If questions still persist, there are information and reference desks with signs bearing the invitation, "Please Interrupt Us."

As the Library of Congress classification system is used at the library, genealogical material is well dispersed. To offset this there is the advantage of predominately open stacks, an encouragement for browsing. The researcher, however, is urged to make use of the main card catalogs situated on the second floor close to the CB-CT section. Special Collections on the third floor contains the William Wyles Collection on Lincoln, the Civil War, and Westward Expansion. The card catalogs indicate which materials are included in the Wyles Collection, as they do for any other volumes located at places other than their regular section. There are no call numbers for government publications but a card file is maintained at the service desk for that department.

To assist in the use of the floor plan a legend with Library of Congress classifications for subjects with genealogical potential follows. Always keep in mind that every system has its peculiarities, and exceptions to rules abound. You may find things of value in classifications overlooked here.

ANCESTOR TABLES

This is the third in a series of ancestor tables submitted by members, a project with a goal of including contributions from the entire roster of the Society. Numbering is in the Jacobus fashion with generations spaced for greater delineation. Names are followed by year of birth and birth-place, year of death and place. The tables date back only as far as the immigrants, who are designated (I), a mark not employed for children in their company or immigrating separately. Unknowns are shown by question marks and approximate dates by underlining.

BOOK REVIEWS

Books of genealogical interest will be accepted for review in this section of ANCESTORS WEST, the review appearing as soon as possible after receipt. Following the review the volume will be placed in the society's library.

THE DESCENDANTS OF HENRY AND POLLY MILLER OF BEDFORD, NY 1766-1977. Compiled by Eric E. Hovenmeyer. (privately printed 1977), 362 pages, appendixes, index, bibliography, illustrations, charts. $20. Available from Eric E. Hovenmeyer, 22 Evergreen Ave., Apt. C-1, Hartford, CT 06101 or Gretchen A. Hovenmeyer, 10 Agassiz St., #21, Cambridge, MA 02140.

"An expanded version of (the author's) Some Descendants of Griffin H. Miller ... published in 1972," this book begins two generations earlier and includes additional descendants (over 300 listed), "more detailed and accurate" data, and added biographical and historical material.

The genealogical data was "compiled primarily from personal correspondence with present-day descendants." Charts and data are organized 'vertically' by lines of descent, rather than 'horizontally' by generations, (with) each branch of the family ... described as a unit in one section. The charts and numbering system are easily understood and the data is well organized and interesting. As the author states: "This book should be used not so much as a source of genealogical information, but rather as a guide for doing the research that would document that genealogical information."

Included is material on the following allied families: BRAWNER, CORSON, COULTER, CROCKER, CURTIS, DIXON, FANCHER, FERNYHOUGH, GOLDSBERRY, HARDING, HOLLISTER, HOLMES, HORTON, HURD, JONES, KELLOGG, LANDE, LYON, PORTER, REYNOLDS, RUNDLE, SILKMAN, STEVENS, TYLER and WINTHROP.

Despite its lack of documentation, an acknowledged omission, the book is a valuable collection of family records for this branch of the Miller family and serves as an excellent example for those who are trying to organize their own family records for publication.

PRESERVING YOUR PAST, by Janice T. Dixon and Dora D. Flack. (Garden City, NY: Doubleday & Co., Inc.), 314 pages, illustrated, $8.95.

"Everyone has a story to tell, his own." So say the authors as they proceed to give a very comprehensive and descriptive account of "A Painless Guide to Writing Your Own Autobiography and Family History." Not only do they properly advise the aspiring writer, but include a wealth of information for the genealogical researcher: where and what records are available; how to organize and file; types of forms to use; writing instructions for securing vital statistics, service records and items from the National Archives; bibliography of basic genealogical publications; copyrighting (unfortunately made obsolete by subsequent legislation). A helpful guide for anyone contemplating the type of work addressed.
