President's Message ____

For years, we have dreamed of our own entrance into our very own library. The dream is here and a portion is depicted for those who have not yet seen our new home. But the word is out and attendance is up. Our handsome sign was designed by Gary Jensen, husband of Cheryl, a member, and handcarved on both sides by Jack Pierce, husband of Alyce and father of Ken, who are also members. We are justly proud.

Activities have increased and the new routine is settling in. We continue to be sure the event will be a grand success. House, try to attend the November affair. Is settling in. We continue to need volunteer workers who can help us with both regular and intermittant tasks. Along with the satisfying increase in hours goes the need for more help. If you can give any hours, even on a one-time basis, call Zanita at 967-7706, or Doris Crawford, Librarian, at 962-3040.

Our Open House on April 5 was a huge success for which we can thank Sandy Strickland, and Maggie Munro of the Historical Society. There has been so much positive feedback from those who attended.

The year speeds by and we are closing in on another big event, celebration of our 20th anniversary in November. Sandy will be our coordinator again, so we can

If you didn't make the April Open We'll announce the date later.

POMMERANIANS ONE AND ALL

By Marjorie Kleinschmidt, SBCGS member

When I tell people that I am a Pommeranian the puzzled amazement on their faces tells me that they are picturing a small dog with long silky hair, pointy ears and a bushy tail curved over its back. Of course, they are right, and so am I. Both the dogs and my ancestors are named for the same land. Back in the middle ages German sheepherders living on the south coast of the Baltic imported dogs from Finland to use in their work. Later English traders took home some of the runts from the litter and proceeded to breed the little pet dogs we know as Pomeranians today.

The land of my ancestors is a piece of lowland along the southern coast of the Baltic stretching from the Vistula River to the Elbe, roughly 75 miles wide.

In prehistoric times it was settled by Germanic tribes. By the third century A D the Germans had been replaced by Slavic people, who called themselves "Wends", that is, "dwellers in flat land". The eastern portion was known as Pommern (by the sea) and the western as Luetzen. At first leaders of individual clans vied with each other for power until, finally, one family, the Greifen, became strong enough to unite the land under one rule. Their coat of arms was a red griffen.

Ancestors of mine may have come to Pommern with the merchants of the Hanseatic League in thirteenth and fourteenth centuries or they may not have arrived until Fredrick the Great asked for Colonists to help renew a land devastated by wars. Whether they came early or late, they helped to shape the land and the land moulded them to be Pommeranians.

FROM ADOBE TO ROSE WINDOW

First United Methodist Church, Santa Barbara, California By Susan Miles Gulbransen

The first protestant preacher came to town riding on a horse in Methodist circuit-rider style. Since the little village of Santa Barbara had been nearly all Roman Catholic under Mexican rule until 1848, there was no protestant worship until statehood in 1850.

The Rev. Adam Bland rode circuit from San Francisco to Los Angeles. He held his first service at the Aguirre adobe, located on the northwest corner of Anacapa and Carrillo streets, in May 1854. If you missed that one, you had to wait until August when he returned for his next quarterly visit.

Gold and the westward movement enticed hoards of people to California in the 1850s and 60s. As more made Santa Barbara home, the demand for ongoing church services brought in the first full-time minister in 1867. The Rev. Ralph Dunlap covered Santa Barbara to Ventura, a job that soon became too great. Within a year, Rev. P. Y. Cool replaced him and ministered to the Santa Barbara area only.

The original First Methodist Church which stood at the corner of De la Vina and De la Guerra streets, dedicated December 8, 1869.

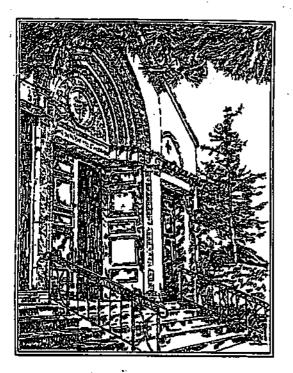

By 1869, they had built a semi-Gothic brick church with a wooden bell tower on the corner of De la Vina and De la Guerra streets. For the next 20 years, this church served the congregation well, although drought and recession problems in the 1870s diminished its numbers.

By 1889, better times had come. Following Santa Barbara's growth directions, new property and a church seating 700 was built at De la Vina and Figueroa. After 28 years of service, a faulty furnace caused a fire which nearly destroyed the building. Rebuilding bigger and better, the Methodists were able to use their church less than seven years before the earthquake hit Santa Barbara early in the morning of June 29, 1925.

In keeping with the new Santa Barbara architectural guidelines after the earthquake, the Methodists under the Rev. Samuel Hughes bought new property for $35,000 at the corner of Anapamu and Garden streets, which allowed for off-street parking.

ANCESTORS WEST, SBCGS, Vol. 18 No. 2, Summer 1992

Not all was easy for the congregation, though. The city had been devastated by damage and raising additional funds became even more difficult. They worked particularly hard to raise $4,500 for stained glass windows in the sanctuary. For more than two years, the Methodists met in Alameda Park or the newly finished Santa Barbara High School while a beautiful Spanish Renaissance church took shape. Its first services celebrated Christmas in 1927 for an exhausted but enthusiastic congregation.

Present location, 305 E. Anapamu St. at Garden St.

Over the years, the names and personalities of ministers like Hildebrand, Frank с. Will Μ. Matthews, O. Franklin Archer and LLoyd Saatjian have filled now the pulpit and quided its direction. Under them, the building has had a new pipe organ installed, the altar remodeled and walnut wooden paneling added to the sanctuary. The church has also served the greater community through weekly activities like the high school tutorial program or a child care center.

Everyday light streams through stained-glass window the rose in the back of the church. This richly colored light filters through glass etched and patterned with symbols of Christianity. It reminds us of those who have worked to create this architectural beauty while serving the religious and civic communities of Santa Barbara.

NOT ALL IMMIGRANTS REMAINED IN AMERICA

Michael Shapiro in his article "Leaving America" in World Monitor, April 1992, says, "Immigration is supposed to be about moving to America, loving America, and making America home. It is not supposed to be about leaving." "But 10 million of the 30 million immigrants admitted to the United States between 1900 and 1980 did just that." It is judged by those studying migration that the same ratio is true today.

The author says many who come to America return to their homeland because they are disillusioned but return migration does not always mean defeat. For many the plan is to work here until they have enough to return to their homeland whether it is money or skill and, also, when their native land begins to offer brighter prospects it is an invitation to return. He says that most of those fleeing persecution do not return nor do many who find more opportunity and money in America.

NORTH COUNTY NEWS Greeta and Al Hardy

A step back in time takes us to 8 December 1787 in the Lompoc Valley to a place called Algsacupi by the local Indians where Fr. Fermin Francisco de Lasuen is dedicating the site chosen for Mission La Purisima. Today there are still some ruins of the original mission at 500 South F Street in Lompoc.

And so "En la Iglesia de esta Mision de la Purisima e Immaculada Concepcion de Maria Santisima, Nuestra Señora, Madre de Dios" was established. In addition to the friendly Indians, the Valley of the Rio Santa Rosa (Santa Ynez River today) was a rich and fertile land. Because the weather was bad and with no place to stay Fr. Lasuen along with his party returned to Mission Santa Barbara.

To reach this point in time, ten years of planning and constant confrontation with the civil and military authorities had been endured by Fr. Junipero Serra and his successor as Father-President of the California Missions, Fr. Fermin Francisco de Lasuen.

Fr. Serra and Governor Felipe de Neve were in agreement as to the importance of establishing three missions along the Santa Barbara Channel coast. The southern most, San Buenaventura, was founded in 1782. The remaining two, Santa Barbara and La Purisima were delayed because of disagreement over who was to furnish the initial supplies needed to found a mission. Fr. Serra did not live to see the completion of the Santa Barbara and La Purisima missions.

It was not until after the rainy season in March 1788 that construction of more permanent buildings were started. Soldiers and workers arrived from the Presidio of Santa Barbara to help with the construction. All travellers were accompanied by three or four soldiers whenever they ventured forth from areas of habitation.

On 10 April 1788 Fr. Lasuen returned to the Lompoc Valley along with first permanent missionaries, Fr. Vincente Fuster and Fr. Jose Arroita. La Purisima was at last a reality. Fr. Lasuen wrote in the books of baptisms, births, and deaths, "...Founded in the plain of the Rio Santa Rosa in the site known to the natives as Algsacupi, at the expense of the Catholic King of Spain and its Possessions, Don Carlos III (whom God protect) by the religious of the Apostolic College of the Propagation of the Faith of San Fernando de Mexico, to whom His Majesty confided the conversion and administration of the whole of New California..."

The first baptism in the church was on Sunday, 10 May 1788. The first marriage occurred the same day. By the end of 1788 Fr. Fuster and Fr. Arroita had recorded 95 baptisms, 25 marriages and no deaths. The first burial occurred on 14 February 1789.

Within three years of the founding of La Purisima on 8 December 1787, a tileroofed quadrangle was completed, built in stockade-style, and plastered with mud. Between 1800-1802 the structure was gradually rebuilt with more permanent walls of adobe.

The year 1800 saw the mission with 961 Indian residents, 1600 head of cattle, 4000 sheep, 250 horses, and 36 mules. The agriculture products consisted of wheat, corn, and beans.

The mission continued to prosper and grow in the spiritual as well as the temporal order until 21 December 1812 when two earthquakes and a natural dam broke, the mission was destroyed beyond repair. The earthquakes were followed by heavy rains that further prevented recovery of anything. The physical condition of the mission made the finding of a new site a necessity. After looking at possible locations in the valley, a new site was chosen in the mouth of La Canada de los Berros (the Canyon of the Watercress). This was across the Santa Ines River about four miles northeast of the destroyed mission. The site protected the mission from the prevailing sea breezes and was directly on the Camino Real. The old mission was unaccessible by travellers when the winter rains caused the river to rise and at times overflow its banks. This wouldn't happen at the new location.

The padres and neophytes immediately started constructing the new mission. After the experience of the earthquakes it was decided to build the mission in a line of buildings instead of the standard closed square. The padres felt it would be easier to evacuate this straight line arrangement in case of another earthquake. Construction was completed in 1815 and included space for the padres living quarters, an office, guest rooms, dining room, store, and a small chapel

In 1816 workshops and quarters were completed with space for soldiers quarters. The workshops had room for eight looms for weaving woolen blankets and cotton material for clothing. With the exception of the initial supplies, the mission was expected to be self sustaining.

The excellent water distribution system was improved with the addition of a central fountain and two lavanderias (washing and rinsing basins). La Purisima had reached the pinnacle of its good times. The year was 1817.

Starting in 1818 all the good work of La Purisima started to fall apart. The on going Hidalgo revolt in Mexico stopped all salaries, both of the missionaries and the soldiers. All help from Spain and Mexico ceased. The missions were left to survive as best they could. To further complicate matters the military demanded and received support from the missions to make up for their losses. This caused discontent among the Indians as they lost many of the things that they had become used to. In addition, the soldiers took to mistreating the Indians who they had not particularly liked from the beginning.

On 21 February 1824 the Indians of the three Santa Barbara missions, Santa Ines, Santa Barbara, and La Purisima, revolted. Success for the Indians only occurred at La Purisima. The revolt was over when, on 22 February, the soldiers sent from Santa Barbara to quell the revolt ran out of powder for their weapons. During negotiations the soldiers and their families, of La Purisima, were held hostage for a time before they were allowed to go to Mission Santa Ines. The Government in Monterey was outraged. They dispatched a troop of soldiers to deal with the Indians. Travel conditions being what they were in 1824, it took the soldiers a month to reach La Purisima. After maneuvering to surround the mission, the main force advanced on the front of the mission. After about two and one-half hours the Indians surrendered. Lt Jose Maria Estrada, commander of the troops from Monterey, and Captain de la Guerra, commander of the soldiers from Santa Barbara, who arrived to late for the "battle", decreed punishment which sentenced seven Indians to death; the four ringleaders to ten years in the presidio (Santa Barbara ?) and perpetual exile from California. Eight others received eight years imprisonment.

During the next ten years the Indian population maintained a steady decrease. Those that remained labored, without compensation, for the military. In 1834 Governor Jose Figueroa decreed the secularization of the missions. This placed the missions under civil rather than religious administration.

The resident padres "retired" to Mission Santa Ines, about 25 miles to the east. From that time until La Purisima was abandoned, the padres from Santa Ines made only occasional visits. Religious services were held in the La Purisima Chapel as late as 1835 and occasional baptisms and funerals were held until the early part of 1850.

After nine years of secularization the missions were returned to the Franciscans on 29 March 1843. Two years later the church sold La Purisima to John Temple of Los Angeles on 4 March 1845 for $1100.

Although the main residence building remained in relatively good condition the other buildings fell into ruin. Over the years it was used to shelter sheep and cattle, to house a blacksmith's shop, and for a time, even a part was used as a saloon.

On 24 January 1874, President Ulysses S. Grant signed a document in Washington, DC that restored La Purisima to the church. The mission continued to decay with no effort being made to restore the mission. La Purisima was in truth abandoned by the church.

Around 1880 a fire damaged the roof and the main residence building became a stable and a storage area. Souvenir hunters were soon taking roof and old floor tiles. In 1904 the remaining tiles were removed from the roof to alleviate a safety hazard.

Over the next three decades the site was slowly covered with silt and drifting sand, and eventually the only reminders of the past were an occasional section of wall, some shapeless mounds of brown adobe overgrown with weeds and brush, and nine of the original 18 white columns. The State of California acquired possession of La Purisima in 1930. Only one other mission was acquired by the state. In 1934 the Civilian Conservation Corps was assigned the task of restoring the ruins of La Purisima to it's old glory.

That is another story for another time.

IT'S "WHO" YOU KNOW By Peggy M. Singer

We're all familiar with that old expression. "It's not WHAT you know: it's WHO you know. In genealogy the contacts you make may be just as important as they are in business or politics. and often can spell the difference between success or failure.

I've been amazed at the number of people researching their family history who tell me they don't write letters beyond what is to obtain a vital record or a document. necessary A couple of vears ago I chaired a committee surveying records in our county that would be of interest to genealogists. I wanted to include a list of genealogies and their owners, but ran into stiff Several people told me they didn't want their resistance. names listed because, "they might get a lot of letters to answer". For me, writing letters has produced a bonanza of information.

One day I saw a query in a genealogy periodical. A woman in San Diego had placed the query and although I had no information about the ancestor she was seeking, her name caught my It eye. was was Gump. So was my great grandmother's. I wrote the woman and she answered, telling me that Gump was her married name and she had no information on the family, but her sister-in-law ín Nebraska was tracing the Gumps and so she had sent my letter to In due time I heard from the sister-in-law. her. She couldn't find my Sarah Ann Gump among her records, but suggested I write to a man in Ft. Wayne, Indiana. I did and got my whole Gump line and my family was included in the book he was just getting ready to publish.

A few months later, I received a letter from a woman in Kansas City who had seen my name in the Gump book. She turned out to be my second cousin and was able to give me considerable information on my Miller line. We've continued to correspond and, sharing with one another, have worked our way back to a Rev. War soldier.

On my Whitcomb line. information had come down through the family that they were from Pennsylvania. I spent months searching I found Whitcombs aplenty, but could Pennsylvania records. not make a connection to my g.g. grandfather. In another periodical I upon the name of a woman researching Whitcombs and wrote came to her. She couldn't help me, but suggested I write to a man in Billings. Montana. Ι did. He sent me several of pages information and pointed out that I couldn't be descended from the Pennsylvania branch of the family. He suggested I look at the vital records of Stow. every letter is answered. I wrote to a cousin of Not mν husband's in Racine a couple of times, but could not get an answer Two years later I got a call from a woman and so gave up on him. who lived near him and. like me, was looking for information on the Stindle family. She had visited him and he had shown her mν letters. She contacted me and between us we were able to put together the family history back to the immigrants.

These, of course, are only a few of my letter writing experiences. I have a file drawer bulging with correspondence.

The best way to make contacts is to join a genealogical society in the area you are researching. Place queries in their newsletter and watch for others researching the same surnames. There are other sources, such as the Ancestor File, now available in many Family History Libraries and the Family Register in the Family History Library in Salt Lake. Don't hesitate to write even if the connection seems a bit obscure and, of course, include a SASE.

Receiving letters from people all over the country has been one of the joys and often, one of the surprises, of genealogy. On almost every family line that I have researched I have, sooner or later, made contact with a person who either had information I needed or who became a valuable ally in my search. I find it just as rewarding when I can help someone else. Don't underrate the value of writing letters. The "WHO" you get to know may save you hours of fruitless search.

HINTS TO THE SELF-PUBLISHER

Some self-publishing hints from Heritage Quest #37 by Ethel Jackson Price are worth repeating.

When your manuscript is completed, with publication plans decided, is the time to take prepaid "orders" from family and friends. This method helps offset the cost of publishing and gives an idea of how many books to have printed.

Since January 1, 1978, written work has been legally copyrighted from the moment it's put on paper. Titles cannot be copyrighted. Be sure to place a correctly worded copyright notice on a page at the front of the book. Do not give copies to anyone without the notice. If you forget to include this notice, the manuscript becomes "public domain" and anyone can use it and could even have the copyright registered in their name. Copyrighting is really registering the copyright to provide protection, should authorship be challenged.

Price suggests that if you want to save money, it is perfectly legal to put a single copy of your manuscript into a manila envelope, seal it and mail it to yourself. When it arrives, do NOT open it. Leave it sealed. Put it away somewhere in a safe place. The official postmark on the sealed envelope will provide the date it was written, should there be any question.

The Ancestry of Samuel Blanchard Ordway, 1844-1916 by Dean Crawford Smith, Edited by Melinda Lutz Sanborn. For further information, contact SBCGS member, Dean Crawford Smith, 215 Moreton Bay Ln #1, Goleta, CA 93117 or NEHGS.

The book is linen bound on acid free paper and has 395 pages, plus 36 pages of index. It also includes a 96 page (plus a 5 page index) Ordway-Smith Supplement. It was published by the New England Historic Genealogical Society, 101 Newbury St., Boston, MA 02116, 1990. A striking feature: charts of the paternal ancestry and of the maternal ancestry of Samuel Blanchard Ordway on the end papers of the front cover. Overleaf is a color reproduction of a portrait of the subject in uniform as Private, First Regiment, New Hampshire. Next is a list of the family lines included in the text followed by a page: IN MEMORY OF MARION ALICE ORDWAY (1897-1972) "A kind and gentle woman".

There is a Table of Contents, a List of Illustrations, a Preface, ll pages of references, nine page discussion of the Ordways in England followed by 18 pages of English records of Ordways.

The text opens with a 22 page discussion of this family of English Ordways. The direct descent from three generations in England is related before the arrival of James Ordway in New England in Dover 1641/42, shown by his own deposition in 1704/05. From here on the history of this Ordway family, along with numerous lines that come into it, is told in detail. The story is well written in an interesting way with abundant documentation, well integrated into the text. Charts, maps and photographs are so inserted at appropriate places they add a great deal of fact and interest. While it is easy to keep the generations straight, there is no complicated numbering system involved. This genealogy meets the high standards set by Jacobus and other fine genealogists with the excellent source material and scholarly script.

GEDCOM Data Transfer, by David Hawgood MBCS FSG, published by Hawgood Computing Limited, London, England. Available through SBCGS Book Sales, $6.00. Mail orders add $1.75 postage and handling.

A 37 page booklet, with three appendices and index, GEDCOM is a method of transferring genealogy. It was initiated by the LDS Church Family History Department. GEDCOM is derived from GEnealogical Data COMmunication.

Appendix A lists 30 different genealogical softwares. These packages have different ways of holding information. One package may transfer all or part of its data to a file in the common GEDCOM format. GEDCOM is the link. The other package imports the GEDCOM data to its own structure. GEDCOM includes information about family relationships and is lineage-linked. It has a different structure from any genealogical database. It is an ASCII file avoiding control characters.

Mr. Hawgood says to back up your data before using GEDCOM. He suggests you import (receive) GEDCOM data first into an empty database, check it out, decide if the data is suited to transfer all or selected people from your new database to your main one. The reason is that not all applications work easily. Rather there are "too many quirks and oddities for comfort."

The booklet lists GEDCOM "TAGS", which are four letter abbreviations for data fields. Illustrations are provided of export and import files. It discusses primarily GEDCOM'S use with PAF and IGI.

ANCESTORS WEST, SBCGS, Vol. 18 No. 2, Summer 1992

Mr. Hawgood repeats the backup, empty database, and cautious approach, using small files to start, until you can work out the kinks that your own program and your version of GEDCOM create.

This booklet could improve your understanding of how GEDCOM is used. If you have "quirks and oddities", it provides several answers.

The first part of this book is a chronological narrative in Bonnett's words and the second part is the narrative in Lyman Copeland Draper's words as he took it down in 1845. There are four Bonnett to Draper letters and excerpts from letters from Bonnett to William Darby. The appendix is a story of Lewis Wetzell done in 1851, using Draper's information on Wetzell. The book gives a detailed look at the frontier society of early American life that was gone by 1840.

The Records of the Royal Air Force, How to Find the Few, Eunice Wilson. 66 pages, soft cover.

World War I Army Ancestry, Norman Holding. 72 pages, soft cover. Both published by: Federation of Family History Societies, c/o The Benson Room, Birmingham and Midland Institute, Margaret Street, Birmingham B3 2BS, England.

Both these books are very specialized but could be of absolute necessity in research. The World War I book is in the second edition. Each leads the researcher on painstakingly detailed routes to information, and along the way explains the resources, and location of the material and offers insight into the subject with vocabulary, technical terms, unit emblems, field maps and a wide variety of correlated information. It would be hard to pick up either book and try to locate information in the midst of it, for the process is important to both authors and they procede step-by-step. The summary of available material, where it is located and how to get to it, is very helpful.

Holding helps the researcher find his ancestor's military unit, warning of pitfalls in records along the way. He provides a very good survey of existing information from the Personnel Records through collections of diaries, monthly reports, stores records, recruitment records and, of course, books.

Wilson's information is similarly thorough and includes that necessary for the RAF, such as field locations, crew listings, the WAAF, other European groups in the RAF and a short section on the 8th US Air Force in the UK. Her book has more illustrations to identify military insignia and samples of records.

DID YOU KNOW that by 1830 Santa Barbara population was about 400, with about 60 houses in the town.

The earliest deed recorded was dated 14 February 1835 granted to Octaviano Gutierrez for a parcel of land to be used as a homestead. It consisted of 100 varas* square located between the presidio and the mission. At that time houses were mostly adobe, with stone foundation. Most had tile a tile roof, with the ground as the floor. Timber was scarce. The first house built with wooden flooring was one built by Daniel Hill about 1824. * 100 varas was a measurement that equaled about 1.75 of an acre.

SANTA BARBARA COUNTY

One of California's 27 original counties. While the county was actually created in 1850, the history of the area dates back to 1542. In that year Juan Cabrillo discovered the Santa Barbara Channel and later, according to legend, crossed to San Miguel Island where he died and was buried. A second Spanish explorer, Sebastian Vizcaino, entered the channel on the Feast Day of Saint Barbara in 1602, and named the area accordingly. Fr. Fermin Francisco de Lasuen founded the Santa Barbara mission in 1786. Santa Barbara Royal Presidio, established April 21, 1782, by Fr. Junipero Serra, was the last of four royal presidios in Alta California - San Diego, Monterey, San Francisco, and Santa Barbara. Santa Barbara had all three Spanish forms - Presidio representing the military, Pueblo, the civil, and Mission, the religious. In 1873, Ventura County was established from the southern portion of the original Santa Barbara area.
