That Friday morning in June began as many other cloudless, summer days in Santa Barbara, but soon the thermometer began to rise and brought a heat wave that has not been experienced since on the south coast. Santa Barbara has been accustomed to the hot santana, downslope winds, which usually occur during the summer months. Some people believe "santana" comes from an Indian word meaning "devil" wind. Other people call them "santa ana" winds. More recently the term "sundowner" has been used, even though the name sundowner is somewhat a misnomer, as they can happen any time of the day. The U.S. Weather Bureau recorded the hot wind as the first and only tropical simoom, or super-hot wind that day.

By mid-morning the temperature in town was about 80 degrees. Around one o'clock that afternoon, without warning, an explosive blast of superheated air swept down from the northwest, not from the east where the usual santanas came down canyon. Some feared the world was coming to an end. The searing furnace-like blast began taking its terrible toll on animals, birds - even full grown cattle perished under the trees where they had sought to escape the heat. Leaves and vines withered and scorched fruit fell to the ground.

A U.S. Coast Survey engineering boat was in the channel at the time and recorded the event; otherwise, it surely would have been scoffed as a figment of someone's imagination. In 1869, the Coast Survey officially reported Santa Barbara's freak simoom in a government publication. This report verified that by two o'clock that afternoon the heat was 133 degrees, even though the sun was obscured by the dense clouds of dust generated by the wind. No human could withstand such heat out of doors. All took to their thick adobe dwellings, closed the doors, windows and remained inside until the wind died down about 5 P.M., just as suddenly as it had began earlier that day. By sundown the temperature had returned to a comfortable 77 degrees.

Santa Barbara's simoom remained on the U.S. Weather Bureau's books as a record high until 1934, when Death Valley, which is 200 feet below sea level, registered 134 degrees.

Note: Africa and Arabia call their hot, dry, dust-laden, exhausting wind of the desert, a "simoom", which may be spelled "samoun" or "simoon".

Michigan courthouse vital records are in jeopardy of losing the public's right to see the records. Birth records are already closed to the public and have been for several years. You may receive a birth certificate only if 1) it is your birth record; 2) it is your child's birth record; 3) you are heir to the person named on the birth record; or 4) you are an attorney representing the person named on the birth record.

BULL BANDS

The custom of serenading newly married couples goes back to antiquity, and it may be that the Pipes of Pan were used for mythological newlyweds. To the English, the serenaders were known as the callithumpian band, to the French, the serenade was a charivari, and to the Pennsylvania Dutch, it was the bull band.

In earlier days no wedding was considered complete until the serenade had taken place. Couples that were separated also were entertained when they became reunited.

Several days after the wedding, the concert would take place wherever the couple was living. The musicians assembled quietly after dark and then suddenly the stillness of the night would be blasted by the sound of the band. There was nothing sweet or melodious about the music of the bull band. The main instrument was the "Sei-geig", and the sounds that came from this can only be described as 'farrichderlich' (crazy, weird).

According to tradition, the "sei-geig" gets its name from the fact that the trough used for scalding hogs furnished the body of the geig, or fiddle, and hence the name "sei-geig", or pig fiddle. Wires were stretched from one end of the trough to the other and as the ends were higher than the sides, the wires, which acted as the fiddle strings, were elevated and could be played upon. When a scalding trough could not be obtained, a strongly-made box was used as a substitute.

A piece of two-by-four, or narrow board, one side covered with rosin, was the bow, and was drawn across the wires. It required a man on each end of this bow to operate the geig, and the noises produced were indescribable. Squeals, groans, moans, roars, rumbling howls, and just plain noise came forth.

Along with the "sei-geig" were all kinds of noise-makers, cow bells and dinner bells were rang, tin horns and conch shells were blown, dishpans, kettles, empty drums were beat upon -- anything and everything to make a racket. This uproar continued until the groom either invited the serenaders into the house for refreshments, or took them to the hotel for a treat.

In as much as the making of the "sei-geig" represented quite a bit of labor, the band was allowed to play for about half an hour, or more, before the groom appeared. Sometimes the new husband was contrary and refused to act as host, then the noise continued until the neighbors put a stop to it.

Old obituaries may give a great deal of information, but often did not include the date of birth. A commonly used expression was "died in his sixty-seventh year". This would mean that he had not yet reached his 67th birthday, because the years were counted from the date of birth.

TRANSCRIBING TOMBSTONE INSCRIPTIONS

On your visit to the cemetery, take along a stiff brush to clean off the dirt on the stones. Lawn clippers will help in trimming away overgrown grass and weeds. Sometimes it is difficult to accurately read the old writing, especially in deciphering dates. Soft chalk rubbed on the stone may bring out the inscription. Do NOT use colored chalk. Brush off the chalk after the information is recorded.

Copy everything of value on the stone: full names, complete dates, relationships, military service, lodge information; then double check everything to insure completeness. Photograph the stone(s) from an angle to take the best advantage of the day light. Note the names on surrounding stones; they may be related to the deceased. Make a sketch of the cemetery noting where the stones are located that you have copied. Note the directions for locating the cemetery.

Later generations will appreciate having the information for locating the cemetery, especially if the graves are located in a small out of the way family graveyard.

POPULAR FIRST NAMES IN GERMANY - 1992

The Society for German Language (Gesellschaft fur deutsche Sprache or GfdS) announced late last week in Wiesbaden (Hessen) that, according to its annual survey, the most popular names chosen by new eastern German parents in 1992 were Philipp and Lisa. In the eleven states of western Germany, Julia and Alexander topped the list. The GfdS based its conclusions on information from some 300 offices of vital statistics throughout the Federal Republic.

In the East, Patrick, Christian, and Sebastian were the next most popular names, in descending order, while westerners preferred Daniel, Michael, Patrick. Kevin took fifth place in both parts of the country, its popularity nearly undiminished since it took hold in 1991, following the success of the movie imports Home Alone, with the protagonist Kevin, and Kevi Costner's film Dances With Wolves. Popular girls' names in the East were Maria, Julia, Franziska and Anne or Anna. In the West, favorite girls' names were Maria, Lisa, Sarah and Katharina.

Among the names German parents wished to bestow on their children - but were prevented from doing so - were Storenfried ("disturber of the peace") and Bierstubl ("bar" or "pub"). Another set of parents, who are fans of U.S. actress Whoopy Goldberg and sought to honor her with a namesake, met with disappointment last year: the office of vital statistics rejected their application, saying that "Whoopy" is a stage name and too closely resembles the English expression "making whoopee." Such rejections occur because, unlike the United States, where parents may name their children as they wish, parents in Germany are required to choose a name which meets two requirements: it must make clear the child's gender and it may not endanger the "well-being of the child." Parents register their newborn with the local office of vital statistics. that bureau has objections to the name and refuses to register it, the parents can appeal the decision at a regulatory agency and after that within the judicial system. German children do sometimes receive unconventional names, but they are the chance result of a liberal judicial decision. For example, a recent article on the subject in a legal journal noted a case in Munich, in which the parents were able to persuade a judge to allow them to name their child "Cougar".

Preserving America's Heritage Automating the Federal Land Patent Records

Speaker: Jim Gegen

by Sandra L. Phillips

Jim Gegen, is Project Manager for the Bureau of Land Management (9LM), Eastern States General Land Office (GLO) Records Automation Project. The BLM, Eastern States is one of the largest land title offices in the world, housing the original patents and supporting title documents for lands that were part of the original "Public Domain" of the United States in 1785. Eastern States has custody of more than 4.5 million such land conveyance documents and title records, some of which predate the D.S. Constitution.

As the United States expanded westward from the Thirteen Original Colonies, Congress recognized the need for an orderly system of surveying and describing the Federal lands for settlement and a method to transfer the public lands to private citizens. Public domain included land won from the British, and later, land that was part of the Spanish possession and land purchased from France and other countries.

At the GLO a record of our American Heritage was being built-patents and deeds, conveyance of title, railroad grants, swampland grants, school grants, Indian allotments, homesteads, and private land claims. Today more than 10,000 books tell of America's past and its people. There are over 5 million title documents alone which have been cared for by the BLM, Eastern States.

Now the BLM is using modern technology to bring record keeping into today's world. Since 1989 a skilled book binder has been removing the documents from their binding, cleaning them, and putting them in acid-free boxes for permanent storage. A minority business firm, using techniques developed in cooperation with BLM, digitally scans each document into a computer file. The faded image is enhanced using computer technology and the critical information is entered into the computer. Both the image and the information are carefully scrutinized. 99 percent accuracy is required for each document. The images are stored on 12-inch optical laser disks, each containing about 80,000 documents. The disks are then placed in a multiple disk storage and retrieval cabinet called a "jukebox." A jukebox can store more than 2 million pages.

Eventually the system will be accessible to anyone with a computer and modem. No longer will you need to know the exact legal description to find the information you need; documents can be retrieved by knowing the name of the person who was granted the land or the document number or the land office that originally issued the document. No longer will you have to wait while someone else is using the document because many will be able to access the same document at the same time.

For example, in the Eastern States public room on the computer screen you can see the data pertaining to the document and can study the image of the original document. You can print a hard-copy of the information and with a laser printer produce a quality copy of the original document even on parchment paper. From a remote location you can view the document data or order copies of the images by phone, FAX, or mail. Regular users can establish an account with BLM to cover the cost of retrieval and the cost of printing and shipping the document from BLM.

The system has been designed to be user friendly, simple to use, and easy to learn. Locating a document takes only minutes not hours and it saves the taxpayer thousands of dollars. The system makes land records accessible in an economical and efficient way while safegarding the precious documents of America's heritage. No longer will the original documents be subject to wear and tear or possible destruction. They will be preserved forever as part of our nation's past and the information will be more accessible than ever before. With continued funding, all of the millions of records will be online by October 1996.

Automation has been completed for AR, LA, MN, MI, FL, and WI. Work is in progress for MS and OH. Work remains to be completed for AL, MO, IL, IN, and IA.

Because the Thirteen Original Colonies and their territories were not part of the Federal lands acquired during national expansion, BLM does not maintain the land records of 18 eastern non-public land states or the District of Columbia. These states are CT, DE, GA, KY, ME, MD, MA, NH, NJ, NY, NC, PA, RI, SC, TN, VT, VA, and WV. Inquiries concerning land records for these states should be directed to the individual state archives or land records offices.

WRITING AS A RESEARCH TOOL By Peggy M. Singer

Visiting the library at UCSB one day I shared a table with an elderly lady whom I had met and whom I knew had been tracing her family history for many, many years. In the course of our conversation she revealed two things. One, that she had just celebrated her ninetieth birthday, and two, she said. "I think I have just about enough information now that I can begin to write my family history". I cheered her on as best I could, but in my mind's eye I could see voluminous files filled with raw notes and I found myself speculating on whether this frail lady was going to live long enough and find the energy to sort them all out and to finish the task she'd started.

I, too, had become so engrossed in research that in a few years time I had filled several notebooks. One day looking at this accumulation, it occurred to me I might not find the determination to sift through it all. And what would happen to all this hard work if I were unable to, or not around to, decipher it. My research was far from complete and I had not been able to document every connection, but I decided to write up as much as I had on each family unit. After all, I told myself, I could always add to it or subtract from it as I continued my research. And so I began.

It wasn't long before I experienced a kind of "revelation". It was so dramatic that I wanted to collar everyone I met and say, "Hey, guess what happened to me!" I then discovered I was far from alone. Everyone I "collared" who had written a family history had experienced the same "revelation". Why then, in all the classes, seminars and workshops I'd attended had no one ever mentioned that this would happen? Perhaps it is just hard to describe so no one tries. I'm going to try.

This well-kept secret is simply this. Once you have gathered together some information on a family and you begin to write about them, all the shortcomings of your research become glaringly apparent. Not only apparent, but once you see what is missing you can also see where you need to look to find it. For example:

As I was writing one of my first biographical sketches I saw something that had previously escaped my notice. My ancestor was only four years old when his parents died. The story could not be complete without knowing who had raised him. It also pointed me in a specific direction—I would need to check the Orphan Court records. I did and was able to add considerable information to the story of this family.

This sort of thing happened to me so frequently. I realized writing a biographical sketch, no matter how few facts I may start with, is a valuable research tool. To write about the family you must develop a mental picture of them based on the facts available to you and the chronology of events affecting them. You may have accepted "Jane" as the daughter of "Helen", but by carefully checking the chronology you discover that "Jane" could not possibly be the daughter of "Helen", but if you know "Jane" is "John's" daughter and "Helen" is "John's" wife then obviously you need to check marriage records for evidence of another wife.

You may find that "George" who lived in New Hampshire was twenty-one in 1755. If you know your history you realize he would have served in the militia during the French & Indian War and so you need to check the military records for that period and area.

Writing biographical sketches even though you know you've not found all the information that is probably available, is a good way to consolidate your notes. And even if you are not around to finish the job, the sketches you leave can be easily understood by those who inherit your work.

The hardest thing, of course, is to get something down on paper to begin with. Some people seem to think they can't write unless they have a BA in English. They might be surprised at the number of successful writers who flunked English or never finished school. Others think that what they write has to be perfect the first time they set it on paper. I like what Bill Downey. a professional writer, tells his class: "We should not be called 'writers'", he says. "We should be called 'rewriters' for that's what we do. We rewrite and rewrite and rewrite".

Even if you are just beginning your family history research it is not too early to begin writing. You can start with a biographical sketch of yourself, your parents, or as much as you know of your grandparents, etc. As new information becomes available, rewrite the sketch. Each time you do it will get better and more readable, but most important, you will find that it directs your research into constructive channels. Try it!

"The following statement was made at the end of the enumeration of the Mountain Township, on the 1920 Census for McCurtain County, Oklahoma. The date was January 26.

'Here ends the enumeration of District 148 comprising Ranges 25, 26 and all of 27 East; inside the Oklahoma boundary; of Townships 3 and 4, south in McCurtain County, Oklahoma, and believe me, with its mountains and valleys, its rivers, creeks and branches, it's some district, all right. EPIDEMICS IN U.S. - 1657-1918

Epidemics have always had a great influence on people -- and thus influencing, as well, the genealogists trying to trace them. Many cases of people disappearing from records can be traced to dying during an epidemic or moving away from the affected area. Some of the major epidemics in the United States are listed below:

             Boston: Measles
1687
             Boston: Measles
1690
             New York: Yellow Fever
1713
             Boston: Measles
1729
             Boston: Measles
             Worldwide: Influenza
1732-33
             South Carolina: Smallpox
1728
1739-40
             Boston: Measles
             Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania & South Carolina: Measles
1747
             North America (areas inhabited by white people): Measles
1759
             North America & West Indies: Influenza
1761-62
1772
             North America: Measles
             North America (esp. hard in New England): Epidemic (unknown)
1775
             Worldwide: Influenza
1775-76
             Worldwide: Influenza (one of worst flu epidemics)
1781-82
1788
             Philadelphia: Measles
             New York: Measles
1788
             Vermont: Influenza and a "putrid fever"
1793
             Virginia: Influenza (kills 500 people in 5 co.'s in 4 wks)
1793
1793
             Philadelphia: Yellow Fever (one of worst)
             Delaware (Dover): "extremely fatal" bilious disorder
1793
             Pennsylvania (Harrisburg & Middletown): many unexplained deaths
1793
             Philadelphia: Yellow Fever
1794
1796-97
             Philadelphia: Yellow Fever
             Philadelphia: Yellow Fever (one of worst)
1798
             New York: Yellow Fever
1803
             Nationwide: "fever" (starts on Schuylkill River, PA & spreads)
Nationwide: Asiatic cholera (brought by English emigrants)
1820-23
1831-32
             New York & other major cities: Cholera
1832
             Philadelphia: Typhus
Nationwide: Yellow Fever (especially severe in South)
1837
1841
1847
             New Orleans: Yellow Pever
1847-48
             Worldwide: Influenza
             North America: Cholera
1848-49
             Nationwide: Yellow Fever
1850
             North America: Influenza
1850-51
             Hationwide: Yellow Fever (New Orleans: 8,000 die in summer)
Nationwide (many parts): Yellow Fever
Worldwide: Influenza (one of disease's greatest epidemics)
1852
1855
1857-59
1860-61
              Pennsylvania: Smallpox
              Philadelphia, New York City, Boston, New Orleans, Baltimore, 1865-73
             Memphis & Washington, D.C.: a series of recurring epidemics of Smallpox, Cholera, Typhus, Typhoid, Scarlet Fever and Yellow Fever.
              North America & Europe: Influenza
1873-75
             New Orleans: Yellow Fever (last great epidemic of disease)
1878
             Plymouth, PA: Typhoid
Jacksonville, FL: Yellow Fever
1885
1886
             Worldwide: Influenza (high point year). Mor hospitalized in WWI from influenza than wounds.
1918
                                                                    More people
                                                                        US Army

1880 Census Claiborne County, Tennessee. By Byron & Samuel Sistler. 1992. Paper, 70 pp. $15.00. Order from Byron Sistler & Associates, 1-800-578-9475, 1712 Natchez Trace, P.O. Box 120934, Nashville, TN 37212.

This handy little volume (5 1/2" x 8 1/2") follows the Sistlers' usual format for Tennessee census indexes. The listings are alphabetical by head of household and include all family members of the same surname with their ages and race, followed by the printed page reference. Those in the household with a different surname are indexed separately. The special value of this volume is the ability to locate families which, because they did not have a child aged 10 or under, were not included in the soundex.

One hopes that this series of 1880 Tennessee county indexes will eventually lead to a state-wide volume such as the Sistlers have produced for census years 1830-1870.

Attention! "Northern England," as used here, means the counties of: Cheshire, Cumberland, Durham, Lancashire, Northumberland, Nottinghamshire, and Westmorland—as well as Yorkshire. So, if you are tracing ancestors in those counties, this book is for you.

To the uninitiated, searching English probates can be a daunting proposition. As the author states in his Introduction, "there were some three hundred courts scattered among forty ancient counties that might have granted probate before 1858." Help has arrived. This volume is primarily a guide to probate records on microfilm at the LDS Family History Library. Its value is that, once identified, these records can be ordered for searching at a Family History Center nearby.

Beautiful color maps help determine the initial choice for court of original jurisdiction as the author guides one through the proper sequence of a search. Alternate jurisdictions are also explained and identified. He then proceeds to descriptions and LDS film numbers for the various records. Descriptions may indicate, for example, whether the record is alphabetically or chronologically arranged.

It is often easier to research English origins in this country with the vast amount of English material available from one source—the LDS Church—than it is on the ground in England. This guide to that collection now makes it even easier.

The Macon [Georgial Telegraph 1833-1839]. By Mary Bondurant Warren and William Brett Hill. 1993. Hardbound, 238 pp. $27.50 ppd. Order from Heritage Papers, P.O. Box 7776, Athens, GA 30604-7776.

This interesting volume contains much more than the usual one or two line abstracts from early newspapers. If it's a good story, enough of the supporting details are included here to whet your appetite for more. Marriages, deaths, legal and estate notices, as well as reports of the Creek and Seminole War, epidemics, and the Cherokee removals are covered. And because many Georgians had gone "west" to Texas, newsworthy events from that area were also reported by the paper.

Considered the "voice of middle Georgia," The Telegraph provided its readers with strong regional and state-wide coverage. Lucky readers will find names they seek, but many will gain a better understanding of the period through these fascinating, fuller-than-usual abstracts from a key newspaper of the South.

Fulgham-Fulghum-Foljambe Family History. By Foljambe/Fulgham/Fulghum Family History Book Committee. 1993? 9x12 hardbound, 128 pp., index. $45 ppd. Checks to: Fulghum Family History Book, P.O. Box 16384, Chapel Hill, NC 27514.

This handsomely produced book (with the family crest gold-stamped on its cover) is a compilation of sketches submitted by members of the family association. Entries are in alphabetical order—either by name of the submitter, or by name of the earliest ancestor described. Many of the write-ups contain warm, humanizing details of those who have gone before, while numerous photos accompany the text. No documentation is included, but for many of the sketches (through by no means all), name and address of the submitter are provided. A 12-page index concludes the work.

Hanson, Henson, Hinson, Hynson and Allied Family Names. Early Records of the Midwest and Southwest United States (Arkansas, California, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Louisiana, Michigan, Missouri, New Mexico, & Texas). Compiled by Ethel Nerim Miner. 199, paper, 129 pp. index. $22.50+$3 shipping. Available from Heritage Books, 1-800-398-7709, 1540-E Pointer Ridge Place, Suite 300, Bowie, MD 20716.

If you've collected a lot of information on a given surname, are not sure how to organize it and own a computer, have a look at this book. It is a reference volume for researchers of "Hxnson" (as the author conveniently refers to the varied spellings addressed here).

Basically, this work is the computer printout of a database compiling various data on the surname from the states listed above. A careful reading of the examples will explain the 11 fields of the database and the abbreviations used. The compiler's notes must also be read in order to understand how pieces of the database can be fitted together to draw a larger picture of a family line. The system is somewhat complex in that fields are sometimes used for more than one purpose—hence, the necessity for a careful reading of the explanations.

This is an interesting format for diseminating a large amount of family material to single-surname researchers.

THE SERENDIPITY GENEALOGIST

People who have no risk factor should stay away from genealogy. Because of the way this country was originally settled, mostly by very common people looking for a way to escape persecution euphemistically called "the salt of the earth" type. (I always figured that meant people who had to work to survive and, therefore, "unsalted" the earth with sweat of their toil.)

Having these very common ancestors means that among the "huddled masses" seeking to be free there were likely to be some real rascals as well as those we don't mind claiming.

Among the patchwork of forebears discovered in my line and my husband's are a few of each kind. Frankly, I enjoy the rascals just as much as the heroes. Unfortunately, some of my more Victorian relatives adhere to the philosophy of keeping the unsavory locked away in the attic.

It may be impossible to write accurate family histories and keep all the kinfolk happy. I still remember an uncle who became irate at a family genealogy bug who had the unmitigated gall to state aloud that an ancestor was illegimate.

Another relative wanted me to revise the statement that a mutual ancestress died in a "lunatic Asylum". Her argument was that we no longer call those places by that name. My argument for leaving it is that the term was the one used in all the papers in 1860 documenting her residency there.

Yet another relative wanted me to expunge her two marriages, which I considered impossible since her children were created by the first of those unhappy unions.

I am not advocating the rascals, but it certainly seems to me that they should be given their due place when they crop up in the family history.

If I didn't write "murdered" by great-uncle George's name, I wouldn't feel right recording great-uncle Noah's death at the Battle of Stone River during the Civil War.

If we are going to claim kinship with Jesse Chisholm, we must also claim the outlaw Dillon brothers. It isn't right to claim all the preachers in the family unless we also document the occasional jailbird.

Searching for one's ancestors means we take what we find and pass it on as accurate history without dressing it up or glossing over the less pleasant discoveries. That's the risk we take when we get into this kind of research.

Rascals have a way of turning up in even the nicest of families.

...0000000...

Salisbury 27 May 1790.. John Langley of this city aged 60 whose wife had been dead but a few days entered again into the matrimonial state with a bewitching virgin of 55 amidst the acclamations of near seventy people who attended the ceremony at St. Edmund's Church.

From Wiltshire Family History Society, England 4/1990

...0000000...

The pride of birth which claims unearned privilege is a very different mood from that which struggles to fulfil the 'noblesse oblige.' The one is the spirit of decadence and looks feebly backward for support, the other is the spirit of unfolding and looks calmly forward through the eyes of duty toward a just fulfilment of the past. The inheritance of plain New England blood has brought us with it no titles and but scant possession of goods,—and no poring over the tables of genealogy is likely to bring us any more of either; but we shall gain thereby many a hint of what we are and why we are, and of the way by which we and our manner of thought have come. Long time has it been commended to us that a man should first know himself;—and in the tables of his ancestors, by the grace of God, lo, there he is.

SANTA BARBARA COUNTY

One of California's 27 original counties. While the county was actually created in 1850, the history of the area dates back to 1542. In that year Juan Cabrillo discovered the Santa Barbara Channel and later, according to legend, crossed to San Miguel Island where he died and was buried. A second Spanish explorer, Sebastian Vizcaino, entered the channel on the Feast Day of Saint Barbara in 1602, and named the area accordingly. Fr. Fermin Francisco de Lasuen founded the Santa Barbara mission in 1786. Santa Barbara Royal Presidio, established April 21, 1782, by Fr. Junipero Serra, was the last of four royal presidios in Alta California - San Diego, Monterey, San Francisco, and Santa Barbara. Santa Barbara had all three Spanish forms - Presidio representing the military, Pueblo, the civil, and Mission, the religious. In 1873, Ventura County was established from the southern portion of the original Santa Barbara area.
